When a company moves to Lakeside, it's always a big deal. But when it's a company that helps sell manufacturing equipment to popular snack food companies and meat and poultry companies that residents enjoy, it's an even bigger deal.

Heat and Control, a California based manufacturer of food processing and packaging equipment systems, will soon move its regional corporate headquarters to Lakeside Ranch. Its Lakeside office will primarily be focused on product handling.

The company recently broke ground on building 12 in the business district and is scheduled to occupy 28,000 square feet by summer 2007. Heat and Control will employ approximately 30 to 40 people at its new location including sales, engineering, service, and research and development divisions.

"In the Lakeside Business District we are always looking for topnotch companies and Heat and Control fits the bill," said Mark Wood, community affairs specialist for Flower Mound. "They are an industry leader and we are excited to have them in Flower Mound."

The company has over 30 locations worldwide in countries such as Mexico, South Africa, China and New Zealand.

Heat and Control designs, engineers and builds the machinery that creates and packages meats, poultry and seafood, French fries, baked and fried snacks, and other quality foods. For information visit the Web site www.heatandcontrol.com.
